

Branching Out

A Coloring Project For Grownups

Art by Lawrence Grodecki

Thank you for downloading this black and white version of one of my digital creations, "Branching Out".

This image is actually based on an original image of a fall leaf, reshaped and redrawn until it became as you see it . . . how odd that the leaf took on such a grainy look?

I've also included a colored version as a guideline only - of course you are free to use any colors you wish. Also, the image size is 8 x 10 inches, so it will print nicely on any standard letter-sized sheet.

Finally, a note on copyrights. While this is a free image, it is free to you and it is not intended for broad distribution to everyone on your email list or similar distribution. It is for your use, though you may print as many copies as you wish.

I actually encourage you to print a few and practice and then if you really like the piece, you may find it desirable to print on something like a 100 lb. card stock, which would be suitable for display and framing.

Please check back to my website soon, as I will be offering additional coloring material, including sets of other black and white renditions of some of my art. Some will be free, some won't. Thanks again for your interest and I hope you really enjoy your coloring!
